Locals Urged to Take Such Steps Deemed Advisable to Ensure Success—President Freeman Re-elected at Highly Successful Convention—Baker's Proposed New School Act Endorsed and other Important Resolutions Dealt With—E. R. Hoskins Is New Secretary

The annual meeting of the Wetaskiwin U.F.A. and U.F.W.A. Provincial Political Association held on Wednesday, Nov. 20th, was held under way at 2:30 p.m. with F. Freeman, president, in the chair, seventeen delegates and a large number of visitors being present. Owing to the absence of A. P. Moan, secretary-treasurer, E. R. Hoskins was elected secretary pro tem. Credentials and resolution committees who were appointed, handled their respective ends of the business very satisfactory, their reports being accepted unanimously by the convention. The financial report being adopted with an amendment, ways and means were discussed to wipe out the deficit of the Association. A motion that the secretary send out a statement regarding this deficit, asking all locals to co-operate to wipe out this outstanding debt, was carried unanimously. Further discussion on the financial report revealed the fact that, although the Provincial Political Association had a political membership fee of 50c per member, the Provincial Association had none whatever. An amendment to the constitution was eventually presented to the convention and adopted: "Resolved, that a membership fee of 25c be made to members of locals and that delegates be sent to future conventions on the basis of one to ten paid-up membership of the Provincial Political Association."

Resolutions, of which there were three, were discussed at all angles, and it was pleasing to note the interest taken in them, visitors from locals who had been given the privilege of the floor without voting power, taking advantage of this opportunity to express their views.

The following resolution, which was sent from Crooked Lake Local No. 644, resolved: "That the members of Crooked Lake Local are in favor of asking the government to put the new proposed School Act in force at the next session," came under heavy fire from one or two opponents, but these were a small minority and the resolution eventually passed with a large majority.

Hillside Local No. 749, presented two resolutions, which were both passed by large majorities. The one pertaining to Orientals to be forwarded to the annual U.F.A. Convention. This resolution was brought up July, 1924 re-affirmed in November, 1926 and in November, 1929. The following is the text:

Resolved: "That in view of the fact that, although the British Columbia, and to a certain extent elsewhere in Canada, owing to the competition of Asiatics, no more Orientals of whatever nationality shall hold title directly or indirectly to any land, nor shall any land be leased to him directly or indirectly for any longer period than one year, and further, that he shall not hold shares in any company or corporation which is a holder of any Canadian land, reasonable compensation being paid to present Oriental holders of land, they being allowed a term of years in which to liquidate their present holdings. We strongly urge the adoption of this resolution, knowing the trouble Australia has had and still has with Oriental labor, and also with the knowledge that wherever the Oriental is, there will be opium and narcotic drug smuggling, it being utterly impossible with any reasonable police and custom forces to prevent and combat this evil with any degree of success."

Hillside Local No. 749—Resolved: "That we are in favor of the proposed Municipal Hospital District centering on Wetaskiwin, and suggest to locals that they take up this question, taking whatever steps they deem advisable to ensure its success."

HAGEN—EDIN

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. J. H. Hibak, on Saturday, November 23rd, at 2:30 p.m., when Earl August Hibak, of Pulaski, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hibak of Fraser Arm, B.C., was united in the bonds of holy matrimony with Jessie Mildred Evelyn Niemi, only daughter of the late Mr. Isaac Niemi and Mrs. Niemi of Ekville. The bride was very lovely in a gown of white crepe de chene. She was attended by Mrs. J. Niemi, and the groom by Mr. John Niemi of Brightview. Rev. A. L. Elliott was the officiating minister. The happy young couple will take a trip to Salmon Arm, B.C.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, entered the living room to the strains of the Wedding March played by Miss G. Norstrom. During the signing of the register Mrs. Nystad sang a solo. The bride was charming in a dress of white tulle and lace. Her veil was fashioned of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. Miss Ellen Edin, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Mr. K. Bjorke attended the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served to about 35 guests. A beautiful wedding cake centred the table, which was decorated to match the living room.

The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Hibak will reside in Edmonton.

THE PASSING OF DR. ARMSTRONG UNITED CHURCH MISSIONARY

The Rev. R. C. Armstrong, M.A., Ph.D., a noble servant of Christ and a missionary of the United Church of Canada, died at 11:20 Saturday, October 26th, in Tokyo, Japan. His beloved Central Tabernacle was dedicated the next day, just before his passing he sent the following message:

To his children in Canada—"Tell the children to carry on and not give up. The only worthwhile thing in life is to live so as to express the spirit of God."

To the Young People of the United Church—"The young people of the United Church of Canada have the greatest opportunity and mission of any people on earth. Canada is an expanding country with a very great future and the United Church has a world vision and a special contribution to make to world Christianity. Therefore, the young people of the United Church have a tremendous mission and responsibility."

To the Central Tabernacle—"Carry on. We need to make permanent the work which has only begun. The great need is wider vision among the people. The danger lies in too great dependence on any one man, whether missionary or Japanese pastor. The foundation of the work must be laid in the congregation itself. There it cannot be shaken. Here he quoted Hebrews: "Wherefore we, receiving a Kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear." Maintain an attitude of quietness and confidence."

Of himself he said—"Looking at his wife" "It has been the greatest joy of my life that we have never polluted the call to missionary service by choosing an easy way or seeking money." "I believe in Christ, and to die for me to live in Christ, and to die in Him. I believe Christ is the greatest life principle in the world. To me, Christ is God."

(Miss Rosie Yonker of the district of Leduc, was riding a bicycle home from school and was run into from behind by the accused.) After a trial lasting all day, the accused was found guilty. This was the first conviction ever registered against the accused, and His Honor took this into account and allowed the accused to go on suspended sentence on entering into a bond for $500 to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for a term of six months. Alexander Knox acted for the accused, W. H. Odell for the Crown.

A WONDERFUL MACHINE

Music was transformed into a ribbon of light and made to write its own characteristics on a cloth screen at Steinway Hall, New York.

When low, pure tones were sounded the strip rippled smoothly like wave motion travelling along a rope, but when harsh, discordant sounds were made, the shining line writhed and contorted like an agitated snake. For all graduating of harmony the line showed distinctive waves, different for each sound, even down to discrepancies in tone too fine for the ear.

The instrument is a development of the Ostro, which has been used for some time to photograph voice and music characteristics. The new device substitutes a moving picture for a "still." It is a mirror, vibrating under control of an electrical current from a microphone that picks up the sounds to be pictured. This mirror reflects a beam of light through revolving mirrors. It was developed by William Baird White, acoustic engineer of the American Steel & Wire Co., and C. Anderson, engineer of the Westinghouse Electric & Engineering Co.

Music students are given a pattern of a perfect sound and attempt to reproduce it in the light. "It seems certain," said Mr. White, "that improvement can be attained in this way, but it also seems certain that no amount of effort will transform a good clerk into a great artist for one of the things demonstrated is that each artist produces patterns as individual as his signature, and although others may be able to imitate these patterns fairly well, apparently no one else can reproduce them exactly."

The Ostro is designed to calibrate the harmony of musical instruments, and detect imperfections, whether in tones from wires or

BECAUSE I HAD A FRIEND

Life never would have been so rich To me—so well worth while— But for that cheering word you spoke, But for that cheery smile; The burden had so heavy grown, My heart was filled with care; I never would have reached the goal Had you, friend, not been there. Because, because I had a friend, One who was real and true; Because your friendship did not fail Just when I needed you, I had the strength to clamber on, I had the will to do. Because I knew I had a friend, I've had no cause to rue.

Oh, there are records of the past That tell of trust sublime, Of friendships that survived the test Of doubt, disaster, time; But I know one that's up to date, That had not had an end When a man defeated fought and won Because he had a friend.

Get a trial package, either powder or tablets, from your druggist, use as directed and indigestion and stomach troubles will go like magic.

GREAT HAVOC WROUGHT FOLLOWING EARTHQUAKE

St. Johns, Nfld., Nov. 23.—Eye-witness description of the devastation wrought by the tidal wave which struck the coast of Burin Peninsula after the earthquake last Monday, spurred relief workers today in their efforts to reach the stricken fishing villages.

The list of known dead was placed at 22 in an official report by Revenue Inspector Dee, who took charge of rescue work and arrived here with the first group of survivors. Unofficial estimates of the dead were between 36 and 40.

A vivid picture of the sudden devastation that descended upon the coast villages was given by the Rev. Father Miller, Roman Catholic priest at Burin, who arrived here with a delegation to place the plight of the residents before the government.

The speed with which the wave traveled along the coast was great, he said, that a warning message from a girl telephone operator at Lamaline reached Burin almost simultaneously with the advancing wall of water.

"The sea is coming in," cried the Lamaline operator over the wire, but her warning was cut short as the wave caught up the telephone office and carried it out to sea. She barely escaped with her life. The Burin operator was unable to spread the alarm, so short was the time before the wave's arrival.

Afterwards it was found that it had gouged a channel four feet deep out of the solid rock and had destroyed the bridge.

Through the darkness dimly could be made out houses afloat. As the wave reached its height, some were flung back with succeeding waves two and three times. Then as the waters receded, they went out to sea with the speed of a steamer.

CLAIM INDIGENT SICK BURN IS UP TO PROVINCE

Edmonton, Nov. 22.—The Alberta government will be asked by the Alberta Association of Municipalities to formulate some sort of health insurance scheme for the province, as a result of the adoption of a resolution urging that the province undertake the care of the indigent and indigent sick.

The resolution came before the twenty-first annual convention of the association at the Memorial hall on Thursday afternoon. It pointed out that the burden of caring for the indigent and the indigent sick was increasing upon both the municipalities and the province, and it suggested that a more equitable distribution of the cost could be made under some form of health insurance plan covering the entire province.

An additional resolution, drafted by the committee in conference with Hon. George Howley, minister of public works, provided the principal address at the morning session.

The convention comes to an end Friday afternoon, when the list of resolutions will be cleaned up. Hon. O. L. McPherson, minister of public works, provided the principal address at the morning session.

Crowding the large dining room at the Macdonald hotel to capacity, and over-flowing into the rotunda, delegates at the convention were guests of the government of Alberta at a banquet here last night.

Harry W. Bright, vice-president of the association, acted as chairman, and introduced the several speakers, these including Dr. R. C. Wallace, president of the University of Alberta; Premier J. E. Brownlee, Hon. R. G. Reid, John Gair, president of the association; F. H. Holmes, association director; Mayor Bury and others.

A WONDERFUL MACHINE

Music was transformed into a ribbon of light and made to write its soul characteristics on a cloth screen at Steinway Hall, New York.

When low, pure tones were sounded the strip rippled smoothly like wave motion travelling along a rope, but when harsh, discordant sounds were made, the shining line writhed and contorted like an agitated snake. For all graduating of harmony the line showed distinctive waves, different for each sound, even down to discrepancies in tone too fine for the ear.

The instrument is a development of the Odeon, which has been used for some time to photograph voice and music characteristics. The new device substitutes a moving picture for a "still." It is a mirror, vibrating under control of an electrical current from a microphone that picks up the sounds to be pictured. This mirror reflects a beam of light through revolving mirrors. It was developed by William Baird White, acoustic engineer of the Westinghouse Electric & Engineering Co.

"Music students are given a pattern of a perfect sound and attempt to reproduce it in the light."

"It seems certain," said Mr. White, "that improvement can be attained in this way, but it also seems certain that no amount of effort will transform a good clerk into a great artist, for one of the things demonstrated is that each artist produces patterns as individual as his signature, and although others may be able to imitate these patterns fairly well, apparently no one else can reproduce them exactly."

The Odeon is designed to calibrate the harmony of musical instruments, and detect imperfections, whether in tones from wires or strings, or reverberations of sounding boards. Mr. White said that it is found sounding boards sometimes reverberate better at some points in the scale than others.

THE BOTTLE OF MEDICINE

A distinguished English physician has told us that Health is found in a way of life rather than in a bottle of medicine. In supporting this statement, there is no reflection cast upon the value of medicine. There are a few drugs which we might say are worth their weight in gold because of their value in the treatment of certain diseases. Their value depends, however, upon their proper use. They must be taken at certain times and in quantities suitable to each case.

The evil that exists and the evil from which a great deal of actual harm results is the taking of medicine, self-ordered, with the idea that the bottle of medicine will cure disease, when what is required is a change of life. If the diet is faulty, if there is insufficient exercise taken, if the body or mind requires rest, these needs, without which the sufferer feels a lack of health, are not to be overcome by his taking one or more bottles of medicine.

The fundamental problem of health is to secure the proper nutrition of the body. This means that the following must receive attention—food, fresh air and sunlight, exercise and rest, and cleanliness. No one of these can be neglected if the health of the body is to be maintained. It is practically useless to think of one without the other. Neglect of any one of them impairs the health of the person who is careless. Neglect in such cases means abuse, and while it is true that the human body will stand considerable strain, it will not permit of abuse. Neglect of one or more of the laws of health means lack of balance, harmony, or disease of the body. Health or harmony cannot be restored by taking a bottle of medicine, when it is the manner of living which needs to be corrected. Prevention lies in the removal of the cause, which, in such cases, is neglect of the body needs.

Questions, concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

ESSAY ON PANTS

Pants are made for men and men for pants. Woman was made for pants. When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man, they are a pair of pants. Such pants do not last. Pants are like molasses, they are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold. The man in the moon changes his pants during an eclipse. Men are often mistaken in pants. Such mistakes make breeches of promise. There has been much discussion as to whether pants are singular or plural. Seems to us when men wear pants it is plural and when they don't wear any it is singular. Men get on a tear in their pants and it's all right, but when the pants get on a tear it's all wrong.

THE NEWSPAPER GUIDE

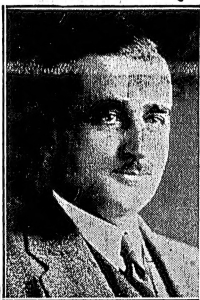

The newspaper that carries a good line of advertisements is to the shopper what the time-table is to the traveller and the published guide to the tourist. Busy people start to study these advertisements in the home or in the office, and before they start shopping they know where they are going. In fact business places are points of interest to all tourists and the non-advertiser puts himself outside the pale as far as strangers are concerned.

West of the Great Lakes

THE growth of the Bank of Montreal has closely coincided with the gradual development of Canada from a small colony to a great Dominion.

In the Bank's westward advance to the Pacific Coast, one of the important links in its transcontinental chain of Branches was formed in 1893 at Winnipeg, when the Bank opened its first Branch west of the Great Lakes.

This forward step, taken seven years before railway communication was opened up between Montreal and Winnipeg, made available to the incoming population on the prairies the stabilizing co-operation of a strong, conservative and at the same time energetic financial institution.

Of the Bank's 607 Branches, 14 are in Winnipeg and 188 in the Prairie Provinces.

FIRST INSTALLMENT

"The game is this," announced Mrs. Clara. Flushed, moist with the twin effects of excitement and a humid tropical night, not to mention one tiny glass too many of the champagne whose bursting corks had lent a Fourth-of-July tone to the party, she stood upon a chair and waved a bunch of ribbons.

Her guests eyed her languidly. Mrs. Clement Clary—"Cooper" Clary's second wife, who had cost him, he not infrequently said, hell, headlines and five millions in cash (the first Mrs. Clary had refused stocks, bonds, or other negotiable instruments, or real estate, when she had finally yielded to his demands for a divorce)—had a reputation for putting a touch of the bizarre into every party she gave, and those present were willing to stop flirtation, scandal, and talk of real estate for a moment.

"We go to the pool," said the hostess.

Several guests groaned slightly. One young man, Billy Leeson, turned to the pretty brunette beside him.

"I'm a hard-working lawyer, down here for a fortnight to recuperate from typhoid. I wish to goodness somebody'd think of a party that didn't mean swimming with your clothes on. I've two dinner suits down here; one's been ruined by salt water; I refuse to spill this."

"Shush!" said the girl. "When Mrs. Clary chalks her cue she usually pockets the ball."

"Honest, you seem rapt and excited and everything."

"Why shouldn't I be?" demanded the girl.

The lawyer shrugged.

"I don't know. Only, you seem a shade different from the rest of the crowd here. Nice, not so . . . so rowdy."

"Just a dear, home-loving maiden, the kind to make some man happy."

oh!" jeered the girl. "Now tell me I'm wholesome, and ruin my evening completely."

"You don't mean that," said Leeson, blushing.

"Don't!" There was a harsh quality in the girl's laughter, which consoled him with the gay eyes, the generous mouth, and the smooth youth of her. "And where did you learn so much about me, Mr. Leeson?"

The young man's embarrassment was painful.

"I didn't mean that . . . that I knew anything about you, only . . . well, you are wholesome. I don't care if it angers you or not. That's what you are."

"... Sometimes I believe I AM an old fashioned girl . . . at heart . . ."

For a moment it seemed as if she would take issue with him, debate the trivial matter; then she laughed, patted him lightly on the cheek, and said:

"Really, you're a sweet boy. And—but you mustn't tell it to a soul—sometimes I believe that I am an old-fashioned girl . . . at heart. Remember me kindly in your evening prayers, won't you?" And the jeer in her last sentence banished the effect of intimacy that had been created by her earlier words. She moved slightly away from him, and paid attention to her hosts.

"In days of old," went on Mrs. Clara, "fair ladies were wont to give garters to their brave knights—a look of hair, a jewel, a ribbon, and sometimes, even, a garter."

"The pretty custom of our ancestors has given me an idea for tonight's party. I have here stately anklets. To each man here I will give one. We will all go to the pool. The ladies will stand in the shallow water. The gentlemen, each holding an anklet, will dive from the deep end. Swimming under water, the gentlemen will endeavor to fasten anklets upon the limbs of the ladies. No fair inching away. Thus will partners be arranged for the rest of the evening's entertainment."

The pretty brunette turned to Leeson.

"We rarely go too far," she smiled. "This, which promised well, has degenerated into an ordinary moonlight swim. The bold garter becomes the timid anklet." She looked at him queerly. "I'll be standing at the edge of the pool," she said.

"Is that an invitation?" he asked. She exhaled fiercely, as though puffing away a strand of hair that annoyed her.

"If Venus asked you for a stroll you'd want to know if she was married, my cautious friend," she jibed. "You needn't bother; only . . ."

"Only what?" he inquired, as she paused.

"Nothing at all," she replied.

She turned away from him again, and in that moment the dinner broke up. Three men pounced upon her; she was dragged away by them. He spoke to a man whom he knew.

"I'm rotten at catching names," he said, "and I didn't get a glance at the card by her plate. Who is that girl?"

"Your dinner partner? That's Lucy Harkness. 'Devil-May-Care,' every body calls her. She was sixteen when we entered the war. Disappeared from home, and her parents were nearly frantic. Lied about her age, her family, everything; managed to get over there. Decorated by Joffre himself."

"Nurse?" asked Leeson.

"At that age?" His acquaintance laughed. "Lord, no! Went as entertainer. . . . Sang . . . danced. Heaven knows where she picked it all up. Turned down all sorts of offers for musical comedy since. Got nearer the front than any American woman. Gassed in a sudden attack, was given the right by Pershing to wear a wound stripe. Don't tell me you've never heard of her!"

"Of course I have," said Leeson. "Only, I didn't recognize her."

"Well, you must have felt the evening's hate directed at you!" laughed the other. "Every man here has been dying of jealousy. You must have a drag with the Clarys, to be placed next to her."

He had met Devil-May-Care! Well, he was glad that he had not met her earlier. Otherwise—he was an extremely sane young man—leaving Palm Beach would not have been easy. In one brief hour at dinner she had left marks upon his soul. He knew that. Now, strolling with the laughing crowd toward the pool, with them but in no way of them, he re-created in his mind her features, her expressions, remembered all that he had read of her in the fevered Sunday supplements. She could drive an airplane; she'd shot a tiger; she'd climbed mountains; she'd debonairly skippered her own speed-boat out to Rum Row off the Jersey coast; and in continuation thereof told a thrilled world that she wanted to meet men who were the spiritual heirs of O'Leone, Blackbeard, Lafayette, and the rest. Scandal always hovered about and around her, but not even its shadow rested upon her. Her friends, the press and public—every one seemed to consider a unique type, one to whom anything was possible and whom nothing enraptured. There was, for instance, the tip that had been given by a ravenous maid, to the effect that Lucy Harkness was having an affair with Ted Kelly, the lightweight contender. She was found at his camp in the Catalinas, unchaperoned, a lone woman amid a dozen plug-uglies. Yet her announcement that she had but twenty thousand on Kelly, and intended to see that the contender properly trained, was accepted approvingly by all the world. The world also thought it perfectly proper for Lucy Harkness to have gone into training with Kelly. She did roadwork, boxed, skipped rope, and frankly told reporters about it. When Kelly met the champion she sat near his corner and was the first to grip his hand when the champion was counted out.

And this was the girl, the woman—she was only twenty-three, but how ridiculous to call one who had done all she had done a girl—whom he had rebuked, whom he had told she was too nice for this gathering tonight.

colored painfully. A prig, that's what he was. And she had mocked him, saying she was an old-fashioned girl at heart. And then, when this chaste old Diana had tendered an invitation, he had not the wit to grasp it instantly, but must clumsily ask her to tell him in words of one syllable. Callow, that was the word.

His feet lagged, and he was last at the pool. The men had disdained bathing suits and, disconcerted and impatient, stood laughing by the diving-board. The women were now tripping down to the shallow end, toes tested the temperature of the water, and shrill shrieks drowned the mirth of the men.

A tall, Viking-like man edged him to one side.

"Stand anywhere else, young fellow," he chuckled, "but give me the pole. This anklet fits a certain girl and I'm the bad boy who's going to put it on her."

Leeson eyed the man resentfully, and yet even in his resentment would have granted the charm of the blond giant. He had met him before, and had heard much of him. Stevens was his name, Tim Stevens. He possessed all those things which Leeson lacked: wealth, assured position, and the things which accompany them. Leeson remembered now that all through dinner Stevens had called across the table to Lucy Harkness, had raised his glass to her, indeed had never seemed to take his eyes off her.

The air was rent with shrieks and cheers. Quite evidently many of the women standing waist-deep in the water had certain cavaliers whom they preferred to be the ones to place the girdles of temporary partnership upon their limbs, for their clapped their hands and cried certain names. Leeson, dropping at once into the crawl, in a side glance took in the fact that Stevens was at his right, a trifle to the rear. He felt an exultation at this little triumph. He'd show this hulking brute.

A hand clutched at his ankle; he went under, strangled, unprepared for anything like this. He did feel that whoever had unfairly detained him was using his body as something to pull himself ahead; then he sank to the bottom of the pool, as a foot spurned him and the unfair competitor shot ahead. He came up to see Stevens within a yard of Lucy Harkness.

He swam to them as Stevens, his dripping features twisted in triumphant smile, bent over and dipped his hands below the surface of the water. Leeson tapped the man on the shoulder.

"I claim a foul," he said quietly. "I like winners," the girl said carelessly. "Losers always claim fouls." She turned to Stevens. "Where do we go from here, Tim?" she asked. There was a final dismissal in her attitude.

"I knew," boasted Tim Stevens, "that even though our hostess didn't seat us together, we'd be together before the evening ended."

"Insight, intuition, or logical reasoning?" inquired Lucy Harkness.

"Logical reasoning," he returned. "I know what I want, and so far, I always got it."

"So far?" she echoed. "But there must always be a Waterloo, mustn't there?"

"Not at all."

"I wonder," she said. "I wonder if the takers are content all through life."

"Why not?" he demanded. "Do the givers look happy? Watch them waiting on table, driving taxis, living in tenements, starving, the takers rule, my dear. But we aren't to philosophize; we're to enjoy the evening. Come."

They were sitting on the edge of the edge of the pool, their feet paddling in the water. Across the pool, young Leeson was leading a young girl from the water.

"Where?" she asked.

"To the Mithraea," he told her. She looked at him thoughtfully.

"What's the idea, Tim?"

"A little sail down the lake, a cozy supper for two."

"But we are guests of Mrs. Clara," she reminded him. "We can't be running away like—"

"Why not? Has she said what the rest of the evening is? Didn't she say that we were to be partners? You know what these parties are like; you come and go. Are you a quitter?"

"You know better," she reminded him. Her voice was languid, dulled, as though interest had departed from the night.

"Then let's go," he said.

Still she lingered, watching a couple mount the steps leading from the water; his eyes followed hers. He turned back to her.

"Did the wrong man win the race to you?" he demanded.

She twisted her pretty shoulders.

"That's a fallacy, that rot about the best man losing. The right man always wins. I mean, the man who is meant to win any particular thing, wins it. He may not be as good or as strong or as clever as the loser, but just the same, the stars in their courses are not more inevitably sure to travel the paths laid out than was the winner certain to win."

"Fatalist! Well, sometimes it's a comfortable faith. And as I was destined to beat young Leeson, stop looking regretfully after him."

NEW GOVT. ACT OF GOVT. ATTACKED AT MUNICIPAL SESSION

Edmonton, Nov. 23. — Amid scenes of excitement and with cheers and counter-cheers, the twenty-first convention of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts closed its three day sessions Friday afternoon at the Memorial Hall, by passing, on a standing vote of 92-63, a resolution declaring that with better supervision of rural schools, the proposed new school act of Hon. P. E. Baker is "unnecessary and unworkable in its nature."

Mr. Baker appeared before the convention and again outlined the principal proposals of his bill, stressing points where he considered that there had been misunderstanding. He particularly insisted that the change from the 3,000 or more separate units of rural schools, to a grouping of 20 districts of 150 rural schools in each did not in any way take away from the control of their rural schools by the ratepayers.

It was on this rock that approval of the bill slipped when, in the presence of Mr. Baker, and after the warmest debate of the convention, the "parliament of municipalities" passed a resolution of Vimy Municipal District No. 337, declaring the proposed bill to be impracticable.

From the opening of the debate on the resolution feeling ran high.

There were arguments against the equalization of the school mill rate in the bill; against the loss of control over the teacher by the local board; against the cost of the scheme; against its working difficulties when put into operation; but most of the opposition centred on the danger of losing control by the local authority.

One delegate said that Mr. Baker hoped to get the towns and villages within the scope of the act, and he pointed out that in such a case, control of rural schools by rural people would go by the board.

Question after question was shot at the minister, who answered the barrage with equanimity.

The resolution read as follows: "Whereas the progress of education in Alberta is quite normal and quite on a par with progress in other lines, therefore be it resolved that, in addition with the present, more and better supervision is all that we need, and the Baker act is unnecessary and unworkable in its nature."

Calgary was chosen as the place of the 1930 convention.

The meeting passed a vote of approval of the work of its executive, in connection with the securing of a promise from the federal government to pay taxes on soldiers' lands in arrears, and urged the executive to press forward for their other objective, payment of the taxes on vacant or leased soldier settlement lands.

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. You have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot put away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Eric Alleweldt Gives Kiwanians Vivid Description Battle of Jutland

Mr. Eric Alleweldt of Britishview, who took part in the battle of Jutland in the Great War gave an account of his experiences. He was an officer in the German Navy. The address was appreciated by the Kiwanis Club, it being the first of kind that they have had the privilege of listening to. The address is as follows:

"I thank you very much for your kind invitation. I gladly will tell you my own experiences in the battle of Jutland as we call it, or the battle of Jutland as you call it, but before I begin I beg your pardon for my mistakes by using the English language. I am here in Canada only for about two years, and I have not much opportunity to perfect my knowledge of a good English pronunciation, nevertheless I will try to give you a picture as good as I can, from that fateful day, the last day of May, 1916, when near the coast of Jutland the world's two greatest naval forces were engaged in a titanic struggle — the first and last time, and now I am going to carry you back to times of war and let you live over again with me the excitement and thrills of those stormy days. I will do so, not only to give you a real idea of the huge fullness of power and strength embodied in the two fighting fleets, but to give you an idea of the unique event in the history of modern sea war, and in the main point let me tell you all those things in remembrance of our brave officers and seamen on both sides who sacrificed their lives fighting a real fair and gallant fight for their country, one that is never to be forgotten.

"It was the evening of the 30th of May, 1916, we destroyers laid at anchor on the Jutland coast of our naval port, Wilhelmshaven. The German battleships, battle cruisers, and light cruisers were there too, all the ships steaming ready to go to sea. May be another advance to the English coast to meet the enemy. This was our talk. When darkness came nothing at all happened. The next day we realized our fleet was in the midst of the North Sea, the light cruisers ahead, followed by the battle cruiser squadron, and last the battleships, all ships going full speed straight north, every group of ships accompanied and surrounded by two or three flotillas of destroyers. It was now May 31st, 1916, the light cruisers as well as the battle cruisers had disappeared and were in front, seek the enemy. None of us knew where we were going. We passed first the German coast, the coast of Jutland drops behind, the fleet going north, full speed ahead. Our leader, the admiral, we knew to be courageous and we had such confidence in his abilities. In the afternoon suddenly one of my men of the wireless left his small room on the deck of the destroyer with a radio message from one of our light cruisers that he was in touch with some light English force, and we all wished that the battle was what we expected would come. A little later we received a further wireless from Admiral Hipper, leader of the battle cruiser squadron, that the fight was going on with the English battle cruisers. I passed the word to all of my destroyers that we might all soon have to fight the famous British Navy, believing that it would be a very serious fight. After the last message, the battleships increased their speed to give assistance to the fighting battle cruisers as soon as possible. These cruisers then turned south so as to bring the English cruisers in touch with our main body. Admiral Jellicoe followed the movement. With the highest speed of firing each group tried to beat the other. At this time both groups were enveloped in high fountains of water. Suddenly two shots of our cruiser hit the last ship of the British, the Indefatigable, and 300 tons of powder caught fire and blew up the ship, causing the entire destruction of that splendid cruiser, taking a crew of 1300."

Mr. Alleweldt went on to give the Kiwanis Club a vivid description of what happened further in the battle, but time and space does not permit us to give the full description.

Mr. Grant thanked the speaker for his fine address.

The Club members were then reminded by the president that the election of officers would take place at the meeting on December 10th.

Mr. Chet Niles and Father Walraven made the banquet hour a pleasant one in taking charge of the musical part or the program.

TIGER OF FRANCE SUCCEUMS AFTER GALLANT BATTLE

Paris, Nov. 25.—At 1:45 yesterday morning The Tiger died. It was the last fight of one who had spent the greater part of fifty active years in fighting, the "terrible old man" whose influence has been dominant during half a century of French history.

The story of Georges Clemenceau in large part the story of France from the gas-lit tragedy-comedy of the Second Empire, which ended in 1870, to the rebuilding of Europe after the World War. But it is also the story of a later we received a further wireless from Admiral Hipper, leader of the battle cruiser squadron, that the fight was going on with the English battle cruisers. MUNICIPAL HOSPITAL AT BASSANO HAS BIG SURPLUS

(By Edna Kells)

Unique in a sense that under no circumstance is it likely to have financial anxiety, is the Municipal hospital at Bassano. The reason for this happy state of affairs is the fact that much of the land in the Bassano hospital district is owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and that corporation always pays its taxes, and promptly! No matter what comes or goes, that income is certain, and the hospital has a surplus of $84,000, including of course, some uncollected debts.

The Bassano hospital is a natural development with the development of the country, says Mr. H. O. Bredin, mayor of the town and chairman of the hospital board. Before Bassano had a hospital — and the Municipal hospital is not the first — there was a need. Illustrating this Mr. Bredin told of a young man who had been injured on his ranch about 1909. The ranch was twenty-five miles from Bassano. The injured man was given such first aid as was possible with limited facilities, and brought to Bassano on a sleigh, with the temperature around 40 degrees below zero. From Bassano he was taken to Calgary. His suffering was terrible, and had the hospital been in Bassano, he would have saved eight or ten hours of this. His case was only one of many in those early days.

Mr. Bredin also speaks sympathetically of the troubles of the doctors before the hospital was available. "I have seen the doctor start out when I wondered whether he would ever get back again," he says. Long distances, bad roads, and extreme cold were difficulties they had to contend with. The hospital means everything to the people — but Bassano could not have a hospital were it not for the arrangement Municipal Hospitals Act.

Before the Municipal hospital district was formed in 1919, the town owned a small hospital which had been built by Dr. A. M. Scott in 1914 at a cost of $5,000 and operated by him for a time as a private venture. This hospital was purchased by the town, both efforts to provide hospitalization for the people were a financial failure. The hospital was too small and the overhead cost per patient too high. In 1919, the hospital was taken over by the Municipal hospital district and enlarged. Again in 1928, the accommodation was increased by the erection of a nurse's home and an isolation block with beds for four patients. The first hospital had provision for 6 patients; the first enlargement increased this to 18; and now the hospital provides for 24 patients and staff. The nurses' home is a ten room building. Home and isolation block were built out of accumulated surplus at a cost of $16,000.

The hospital is a frame building of the bungalow type. One wing is devoted to maternity cases for which the hospital is famed. This wing contains 3 private wards and one 6-bed ward, bathroom, toilets, nursery and case room. In the other wings are private, semi-private, 2 and 3 bed wards, operating room with Wampler dental X-ray machine and oxygen machine, sterilizing room, sun parlor, supply room, diet kitchen fitted up with refrigerator and electric stove, service room, the nurses' dining room and sitting room, and the office. Housekeeping facilities are in the basement, and a tunnel connects the hospital with the nurses' home. A traveller for a big hospital supply house is quoted as saying that Bassano has the best equipped hospital under 50 beds in Canada.

From a standpoint of service, Bassano claims to have the lowest death rate, the least number of hospital days to the patient, and the lowest overhead of any hospital in Alberta. The death rate is less than one per cent. This claim was substantiated by the statistics for 1928. The staff consists of four graduate nurses, including the superintendent, Miss M. K. Patrick, and two undergraduate nurses.

Frequently the staff has its hands full and more. The hospital does maternity work and surgery largely. Nine babies have been tucked away in the nursery at one time. There seemed no way of decreasing the number. One went home and one arrived, shortly after another went home and still another came in the afternoon! As many as four have arrived in one day. Last year the hospital had 96 maternity cases and no deaths. The patients include nearly as many non-ratepayers as ratepayers.

In the Bassano district, as in other municipal hospital districts, the doctors are only infrequently called to attend patients in their homes. People have learned that they can get better attention at the hospital, and at less cost, and they prefer going there. Nor do they object to paying taxes. One prominent ratepayer said he has been paying some sort of hospital tax for 45 years, has never been in the hospital and never wants to be, but he is satisfied to keep on paying. Another member of the board who is a big taxpayer expressed similar sentiments.

There are no organized municipal districts in the Bassano hospital district except the town of Bassano and the village of Hussar. The land is part of the C.P.R. irrigation block; it ranges in value from $5.00 to $50.00 per acre, the high priced land being first class irrigable land. Land is taken at the rate of 2 1/2 mills on the assessed valuation of property with the usual arrangement for town-people whose tax does not equal $6.00. The hospital fee for ratepayers is $1.00 per day, and for non-ratepayers $3.50. Non-taxpayers residing in the district may secure the $1.00 rate by paying $6.00 per year to the hospital board.

The people have got away from the fear of hospitals, says a prominent doctor there. The government should use every energy to develop the scheme and further the interests of the Municipal Hospitals.

Winter No Bar to Golf in Canada

Photograph taken February 23, 1928, of the course on which the contest is played, with gallery watching players. Lower left—Teeling off—player wearing light clothes shows mildness of climate in February at Victoria. Lower right—E. W. Beatty Challenge Cup with miniature reproductions of the cup for the winners in men and women competitions.

The process of snatching the laurels from the brows of California is going right on in Canada. "Our Lady of the Snows" is belying her name in the mild climate of Vancouver Island, British Columbia. Announcement has been made recently that the second annual Empress Hotel mid-winter golf tournament at the Colwood course, Victoria, will be held from February 17 to 23 inclusive, a time when the country north of the 49th parallel is popularly supposed to be feet deep in snow. Photographs included in above layout will show this popular belief to be a fallacy as far as the Victoria course is concerned.

The mid-winter tournament was placed in the Canadian sport calendar last February under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific Railway and proved a great success. The Victoria fixture is a purely amateur affair, handicap, of course, open to men and women, competing in their own sections. The main trophy is the E. W. Beatty challenge cup, at present held by T. L. Swain and Mrs. Hew Peterson, of Victoria, although a large list of other prizes is being posted. The competition is open to all Victoria clubs and also to any visitors in that city, and in view of the size of the entry list all links in the vicinity of the city will be pressed into service.

Did you ever know there is more truth than fiction in the old saying that there is an "exception to every rule" and that "circumstances alter cases"? Well, circumstances have altered the case with me and combined have made it necessary for me to make an exception to my methods of doing business. I haven't the time nor space this week to tell you what I'm going to do—but, "Boy!" just watch this space next week. You'll be interested—it's red hot—it's for you—so be on the lookout. SAY GRAIN FIRMS ROBBING FARMERS

Edmonton, Nov. 22.—In a resolution presented Thursday afternoon at the annual convention of the Athabasca Federal U.F.A. and U.F.W.A. Constituency Association, William Dakin, of Waskatenau, charged that grain producers were being robbed by the grain companies establishing grading samples which are higher than those provided by the grain standards board.

The resolution also charged that the federal government grain inspector at Edmonton was not grading according to legally established standards, but higher standards set by himself and assistants.

The petition adopted by the convention read as follows:

"We petition the government of Canada to enforce the grain standards as established by the Canadian board of grain standards and provide every elevator agent with samples of these standard grades and require all buyers to grade all grain in accordance with the standards of the board of grain standards."

Here and There

A ship of heroes skipped by one of themselves, the unique feature of the sailing of the Duchess of York on a recent trip from Montreal. Six holders of the Victoria Cross, Britain's most envied and most meritorious of war awards, were on the vessel, which was under the command of Captain Stuart, himself a V.C. They were on their way from Canada to London to take part in the dinner by the Prince of Wales to Victoria Cross men from all parts of the Empire, slated to be held November 9. Other V.C.'s travelled on Canadian Pacific liners Minnesota and Empress of Scotland.

The stage is being rapidly set for one of the outstanding developments in Canada in a decade when the English Folk Dancers and exponents of English folk dancing will hold a festival at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, November 13-18. A British opera by a British composer of world-wide fame will be produced for the first time in this continent when "Hugh the Drover," by Dr. R. Vaughan Williams, is put on during the festival, and Canada and Canada will be introduced to a whole new world of art and beauty.

"We are all primarily conscious of fact that this country, measured by any of the yardsticks by which the prosperity of a nation can be gauged, is a very prosperous country, notwithstanding disturbed stock markets and a rather unusual grain situation, both of which are, we hope, temporary," said E. W. Dent, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, at a dinner given recently in his honor by the St. Catharines Chamber of Commerce.

Robert Hume and George Thornton, veterans of many competitions, who teamed up from Manor, Saskatchewan, in the Canadian Pacific Cattle Show competition for boys and girls of the province, have carried off the silver trophy and will join the teams from the western provinces for a trip to the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto as guests of the railway.

Bituminous sand deposits of the McMurray district and along the Athabasca River will eventually furnish the large quantities of material required for waterproofing and surfacing the gravel roads of the western provinces, is the opinion of Major C. G. Ommann, director of development for the Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal.

Colwood Golf Course, where the second annual Empire Hotel mid-winter golf tournament will be staged in February next, is one of the finest links on the continent. Stated, Walter Hagen, British open golf champion, who recently played an exhibition game there. "It is a tricky course that calls for the best in a player and the park-like surroundings are ideal," he added.

George Johnson, son of Henry Johnson, locomotive engineer of 32 years' standing with the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been awarded a scholarship for five years at L'Ecole Polytechnique of Montreal, following the recent examinations for entrance at that school. He is a resident of Three Rivers, Quebec. These scholarships have been offered since 1905, since which year 45 opportunities for free tuition have been offered by the railway.

"We All Like Sheep"

Women Who Slavishly Follow The Fashion

By Ellen Evelyn Mackie
(Saturday Night)

"It was at a smart tea the other day," said a woman who has been living abroad, "that it first struck me how like sheep we all are. Paris says—hats above the eyebrow line. Looking around among a room full of women, eight out of every ten had hats turned off the face. Mrs. W., Mrs. X., Mrs. Y., Mrs. Z."

"Mrs. W.—had rather a wide face and flat features. Hat off the face! Mrs. X.—has long, thin features, rather like King Tut's wife. Hat off the face. Mrs. Y.—has funny slanting eyes and nose like a rabbit. Hat above the eyebrow line. The fourth woman—but what matter? Hat off the face! About as individual as a row of radishes. I was rather flattered myself that I, at least, was different. But a glance in the mirror disillusioned me. My hat had even more of the sheep dip."

Sheep! We meet them everywhere; on the street, in the shops, at tea, at church. Women who slavishly follow the one pronounced style; who exploit the latest fad, regardless, who says the obvious; who think... But do we think? If so, let us think up something original.

Where were our wits, for instance, during the era of the Simple Simon Cloche hats? Not in our heads, certainly. Year after year the world of femininity was a vast army of bobbing cloche hats. Rows of mushroom rooms... Under the cloche hat the feminine face was a mere blur. Eyes and noses were practically extinct. Hair belonged to the dark ages. Heads existed merely to keep the hat from falling on to the shoulders. On the street no woman knew her aunts or cousins. Like moles, we were guided simply by instinct.

What a nightmare we must have been to temperamental designers. They couldn't change us. Like children who cling to their favorite rag doll we were glued to our cloche hats. At last they ceased to be hats, merely roosts for our heads, a high lonce abiding us from our neighbor's gaze. With a cloche hat pulled down over the face in these days, one could get away with almost anything. Perhaps that's why we wore our hats all day. We could snub bores, hit about our ages, fire the cook, run up bills and calmly present them to his lordship, the man who pays our bills.

After all, there were things to be said for the cloche. But what a surprise, not to any shock, last autumn, when we were suddenly confronted with the nude face. It all happened just like that! One night we went home, snug in our rabbit-hut cloche. The next morning we awakened to find the room-questered nook deserted. Some prying designer with ruthless scissors had slashed the sheltering front porch from off our head-roosts. Lo, we stood bare faced... sheep herded in the open.

Of course there was a rush for the range-pot. The lipstick and eyebrow pencil became a cult. Faces that had been tucked away under cloche hats and forgotten, were brought out and dusted (with powder), steamed, the wrinkles ironed out, eyebrows trimmed. After years of being buried alive in a pall of felt, the feminine face was reacquainted, salvaged and given an even break.

If the herd instinct in us ran only to hats... all might not yet be lost. But alas and alack! Fond memory brings the light of other days...

Days no later than last season when we broke into prints. Prints, prints like a glorified rash. Some of us blazed forth, sunbursts of shooting stars, comets, milky ways; whole firmaments knocked down at a dollar-and-a-half.

With others, self-expression started harmlessly enough; tiny cubes, square angles and blocks; all the toys of the nursery pressed into service. Much of the household furniture was depicted on our ensembles... chairs, beds, washbasins, wringers... everything but the kitchen sink. Later the printed epidemic became rampant, developing into skyscrapers, the Woolworth building, cities and even world tours. One woman went about all last summer in a simple little one-piece frock; simple that is, to the naked eye. But get down to actually observing it, and lo, it gave little soul of New York city by night.

It was really extraordinary what self-expression ran to in the printed mode. Flashes of chain lightning, hail storms and even typhoons occurred in church; yet nobody flicked an eyelid. Dogs, horses, giraffes, elephants, the entire Zoo, hobnobbed at fashionable after-noon teas. Dear little old-fashioned souls who never played a game more virile than quarts or croquet, exploited tennis racquets, golf clubs, ping pong tables and poker chips. In these chaotic days of rampant prints, one might bear down upon a crowded street with a chain of racing stables... and not even hold up the traffic.

Suddenly we began to convalesce. We stopped seeing things running all over us. We became sane and wholesome. We grew sner and more wholesome. Then all at once there was a run on WHOLESOMENESS; a sort of back-to-nature movement. We slipped out of our sleeves, ran the scissors down the back of our neckline, prostrated ourselves to the sun... and let nature take its course. Nature did its stuff, and behold a new brand of sheep took dominion... the Sanitary Sun-kissed Sisters.

There was nothing under-done about the Sun-tanned Sophisticates. We were thoroughly baked, turned over, and browned to a crisp. We took it lying down, so to speak. We flattened out like frogs along the beaches, gorged on the cabbages in the back garden, saluted to the chimneys on the house tops. The blacker we grew, paradoxically, the whiter we became. For, of course, sheep-like we all wore white as a foil for our chocolate skins.

Where are these dusky damsels of the desert now? Bleaching in the beauty-parlors, wishing, most of us, that we were only half-baked. And how we cling to our rag-doll fashions. Each season we vow no designer on earth can budge us from the prevailing mode. While style-creators are closeted together planning our undying... or our over-doing, we brag to one another that we, at least, will have none of them. We hug our rags-of-the-waning-season, declaring they are the only

Weak and Nervous Tired and Worn Out Couldn't Do Housework

Mrs. James Hutchinson, Gooderham, Ont., writes: "I had been a great sufferer, for two years, with my heart and nerves."

"I could not do any work, and was so weak I could not stand on my feet long before I would have to lie down. I started in taking MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS and I will never be without them as I find them the best medicine I have ever taken, and I can safely say they saved my life."

"To all weak and nervous women, who are tired and worn out I would say: 'Get a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills at once,' and they will be surprised at the difference in their health in a very short time." smart and sensible styles since Eve's leaves. Then presto! the landscape changes. Nobody saw it happen. One day it wasn't; the next day it was. The sheep troop forth presenting a new silhouette; their wool is marcelled or their tails bobbed.

How we raved when designers strove to separate us from our adorned silhouette. How cheerfully we braced ourselves for the day on a prune and sup of clear tea. How triumphantly we lunched on lettuce leaves and dined on paper-frilled chop. How neatly we nibbled the paper frill, leaving the meat for the dog. Ah, these were the dog days! Dogs, looking back, must surely lick their chops and long for the return of the boyish mode.

Not that we have lost our lath-like silhouette. Nay verily! In spite of designers who are exploiting curves, we still retain our boyish lines and our girlish laughter. But this season we are not so notably like animated clothespins. Nor is it fashionable to emulate a weary wisp of straw. We are not so boyish and brotherly, so manly and man-tailored. Taxi-drivers are not so apt to address us as "sir."

Soon the boyish-bobbed Betty will have passed from the picture; the woman who, in a burst of generosity she gave a quarter to a beggar, is thanked with a puzzled—"Much obliged, Miss, you are a perfect gentleman."

Now the sheep are about to do a new turn. Indeed we are in the very act of crashing the gates of the new autumn mode. Once over, just give us the once-over! New creatures all; old things have passed away.

Legs are demode. Skirts have crept down. We have seen the last of the fatted calf... killed by exposure.

We may not be tailored—but tallied we shall be. The hemline tells tales of tails galore. The wastline is no longer a waist—it has been raised from the knees.

The black sheep will rejoice over the neckline of evening gowns; it strays from the straight and narrow path away down the back, almost counted among the lost.

Fashion creators tell us we may be as individual as we please this season. But do we want to be individual—a marked sheep in the fold? After all, in this age of celluloid drama, canned music, mechanical plano players and thinned sun's rays, why waste time being original. But, ladies, there is yet hope. Let us take example from our emancipated, if dusky sisters of the south; the Mexican women, who originated a fashion almost overnight—quite without the aid of Paris. A fashion which stands out as unique.

It all came about through an enterprising salesman; one of our own country-men, in fact a Scotch-Canadian. He somehow had a tip that the Mexican boleros had not yet embraced the corsets; that the stylish stouts were growing stouter, and perhaps a little less stylish without the staying process of the stays. Being a Scot, he liked to turn a thrifty dollar. Hence he evolved a plan whereby the perfect fifty-six of old Mexico could come into her own—her own corsets, so to speak.

Like some gallant of old, this enterprising Scot hastened to the land of lost silhouettes. He bore down upon them, not with fiery steed, but a train load of corsets at a dollar per. Being a good salesman he quickly bartered his wares. But not being a demonstrator, he overlooked a very vital point. In persuading them to embrace the corset, he failed to tell these dusky belles how the corset should embrace them.

No doubt there was some puzzling moments among these fashionable fifty-sixes. Then they must have called a mothers' meeting or a sisters' session to cogitate on the confusing corset. But their triumph was complete and unassailable. They took their own course with the corsets, indeed they might be called the women who put the corset into corsets.

It was at one of their smartest public functions that the ladies of Mexico decided to burst upon the world in their new regalia. It was then their unique mode became known; the mode which had no part in Paris. As the doors were opened at the great assembly hall where the fashionable affair was held, they appeared en masse, wearing their corsets on the outside of their costumes.

WILL URGE EXTENSION OF OLD AGE PENSIONS; PREMIER GIVES WARNING

Edmonton, Nov. 23.—Speaking to delegates at the Alberta Municipal Association on Thursday, Premier Brownlee warned them to count the cost of old age pensions before asking for any extension of the privileges of the act.

The last resolution passed unanimously by the convention in its closing moment, Friday afternoon, moved by Hail municipal district, read as follows:

"Whereas, our Old Age Pensions Act does not allow for a pension being granted unless the applicant has lived in the province for five years; be it resolved that where an applicant has resided in Canada all his life a pension be allowed regardless of clause five."

The association's executive will therefore ask the government to make this extension to the privileges under the act.

THE DIFFERENCE
Five-year-old Mary was teaching three-year-old Audrey the value of different coins:
"That's a dime; it will buy lots of candy. That's a nickel; it will buy an ice cream cone. That's a penny; it's good only for Sunday school."

The first trans-Atlantic cable was laid in 1866.

GAIR RE-ELECTED AS PRESIDENT ALBERTA MUNICIPAL

Edmonton, Nov. 21.—John Gair, of Killam, was unanimously re-elected president of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts at the Thursday morning sessions of the twenty-first annual convention of that body, and Harry W. Bright, of Macleod, was again re-elected as vice-president.

Hon. George Hoadley, minister of health, addressed the convention at its morning session, dealing with the growing importance of health problems in the province.

Mr. Hoadley denied that he was an advocate of having doctors work for nothing, insisting that his only desire was to see that the best possible medical services were available for every person in the province, including the man and woman who were pioneering on the fringes of civilization.

He defended his policy of state medical service, stating that the greatest danger today was that of having hospitals provided for rural sections of the province, and lacking the necessary skilled services in connection with them.

"There are some doctors who would be better if they were paid no morning sessions of the twenty-first annual convention of that body, and have nothing but admiration for those skilled and humane medical men who are devoting their lives to the amelioration of sickness along the far-flung edges of our great and developing province."

"We are told that Alberta is running wild in its desire to bring medical service to the outposts, and we are told that we should follow their traditions and ethics, but I want to tell you that in Britain today, fully 60 per cent of the medical men are working for the state."

HILLSIDE U.F.A. NEWS

The meeting at the schoolhouse on Friday evening, Nov. 22nd, was a decided success, a large and representative gathering being present to hear H. E. Spencer M.P. and Wm. Irvine, M.P.

Mr. Spencer dealt with the subject banking and credit, of which he has made a special study, and gave a very interesting and informative lecture on what is usually considered a dry subject. It was a very clear and constructive discussion of the need of the reform of our banking system.

Mr. Irvine took as his topic, the Economic and Political Structure of Society. Using the blackboard freely to illustrate his points, he dealt with this weighty subject in a manner both entertaining and instructive, and was followed with evident interest by his audience.

Following the speeches, a pleasing ceremony ensued, when Mr. Hemphill, who is leaving the district, was presented with a small token of the esteem of his fellow-members in the Hillside Local. President Howes made the presentation in his usual able manner. Mr. Hemphill, who was obviously touched, making a suitable reply.

A hearty vote of thanks to the speakers brought the meeting to a close, and an excellent lunch provided a fitting conclusion. Judging by the appreciative comments from members of the audience, it may fairly be said that the speeches were greatly enjoyed by all present, and they provided food for constructive thought, which is the very basis of progress.

On Friday evening, Dec. 6th, the Verdun debaters will invade Hillside, and debate the following resolution: "Resolved, that Continental European Immigration is desirable for Canada."

Hillside, which is taking the affirmative, will be represented by J. O. Harvey, Chas. Dowdell and Mrs. Dowdell.

A pie social is being held in conjunction with the debate, and a big time is expected. Ladies are requested to bring pies, and gentlemen with large appetites are specially invited. In finding a date for this debate, we found it necessary to postpone the card party which had been arranged for, and the date for this will be announced later.

WINTER MANAGEMENT OF THE DAIRY HERD

(Experimental Farms Note)
While a good milking strain is the primary factor in winter milk production, suitable feeds and feeding methods are almost all important. In fact, the greatest results cannot be attained from the dairy herd unless the good breeding is backed up by good feeding. Also, unless a liberal supply of good roughage and a suitable grain mixture is provided, it is useless to expect winter dairying to prove profitable.
Dairymen have long appreciated the value for milk of the succulent pasture grasses which are so abundant in the spring and early summer. To obtain succulence in the winter, or when pasture is not available, crops are made into silage. Silage is one of pasture's best substitutes.
Roots, such as mangels or turnips are also of value as a feed for dairy cattle during the winter months as they are very palatable and add considerable succulence to the ration. A

How well you look!

"I am writing you again to express my sincere gratitude for the continued success I have maintained through my daily use of Kruschen. Only last week a man told me I was a few months ago when I was crippled with rheumatism. He said he had seen me a few weeks ago when I was well and looking like a champion. I replied, 'Yes, I have only Kruschen to thank for it. It will be my daily habit for the rest of my life.'" few roots fed with the silage improve a ration considerably.

To obtain best results from the dairy cows in winter a liberal supply of lucerne roughage should be fed in combination with a succulent feed such as silage or roots. Lucerne hays are high in crude protein and lime and are therefore of great importance in reducing the amount of expensive protein-rich concentrates needed to provide a properly balanced ration for the dairy cow. When an abundance of alfalfa or sweet clover hay of good quality and silage from oats, corn or sunflowers is supplied, it is not necessary to purchase such feeds as bran and oil cake for ordinary producing cows. The addition of a small quantity of a concentrate rich in protein, like grain or oil cake meal, makes a ration adapted to heavier producers of milk. By feeding good lucerne hay meal ration considerably. Lucerne the dairyman is able to reduce his hay, silage and a small quantity of ground oats make a very good dairy ration.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, the roughage fed to the dairy cattle during the winter months consists for the most part of oat, corn and sunflower silages, alfalfa and sweet clover hay and oat green feed. Occasionally, roots and western ryegrass hay are supplemented to give a little more variety to the ration. Salt is fed regularly and fresh water is available in bowls at all times. An average of 15 pounds of hay, 45 pounds of ensilage and 10 pounds of roots, when available, are fed each cow per day and she is given one pound of meal for each 35 pounds of milk produced. The meal mixture fed the heavy producing Record of Performance cows consists of 40 pounds oat chop, 200 pounds bran and 150 pounds oil cake meal.

The best results cannot be obtained without paying heed to the fact that kindness and comfort are matters of importance in the dairy barn. The cow which is nervous and discontented does not make the best responses to feed and care. While in the barn the cow should have her stall as comfortable as it is possible to make it. Keep plenty of good clean straw under her.

Sunlight and fresh air play an important part. Well ventilated stables that provide pure, fresh air and that are comfortably warm are equally as important to insure dairy profits as are feed and care.

Here and There

History was made in Canada when Chief Blinbow Wahwah-litchee (Running Deer), of the Ojibwa, met and created in all friendliness Chief Ocanonito (Deer) of the Iroquois, at Caughnawaga Indian Reserve, near Montreal, recently. There is no record of these tribes ever having met before in Canadian history. The Ojibwa Chief is better known as Paul Cameron, head Indian guide for the past thirty years at Nipigon Camp, northern Ontario. Neither could speak a word of the other's language and conversed through the medium of English.

Judges of the annual fishing contests held at French River, Nipigon and Devil's Gap (Lake of the Woods) bungalow camps, have announced the winners as follows:—
W. H. Graf, of New York, and Frank S. Slosson, of Chicago, tied for the trophy with a 74-lb. speckled trout, closely followed by Mrs. Bundy, of Kansas City, with a 7-pounder; and A. R. Joslin, Jr., of Cincinnati, took the Devil's Gap trophy with a bass weighing 3 pounds, nine ounces.

"The destinies of Canada and Japan lie together in the great Pacific Ocean," declared Hon. Iyemasa Tokugawa, K.C.V.O., first minister to represent the Emperor of Japan, when he reached Dominion soil here with the arrival of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of France, at Vancouver recently. He was accompanied by Togo Fukuma, Japanese Consul-General, both of them being on their way to Ottawa, where the former later delivered his credentials.

What is regarded as a record movement was made recently at the Saskatchewan Wheat Elevator No. 7 at Port Arthur, when in 4½ hours, 550,000 bushels of wheat were transferred from the elevator to the hold of the steamship LeMayne. There were periods during the loading of the ship when the wheat was like a torrent of golden river from the elevator at the rate of 2,666½ bushels per minute.

Fifty different steamship lines now serve to carry Canadian produce to every continent from the coast of Vancouver. A recent trade review issued by the Royal Bank of Canada. The review adds that in a period when the other great ports have had difficulty in maintaining their pre-war volume of trade, traffic through the port of Vancouver has increased steadily. From 132 ocean-going ships in 1913, the number increased to 344 in 1928. The value of the past year's trade of the port had a value of $260,000,000.

The largest sugar beet crop on record in Southern Alberta is being harvested in the Raymond district, centre of the industry. About 10,000 acres were sown in sugar beets this year, 2,000 more than in 1928, and the crop will on estimate yield about 55,000 tons or 25,000 above last year's production.

Cable advices from London state that Captain Ronald Stuart, V.C., D.S.O., U.S.N.C., R.N.R., commander of the Canadian Pacific liner "Duchess of York" has been officially selected to attend the Armistice Day ceremonies at the Cenotaph in London. Captain Stuart is one of the youngest lineal captains on the North Atlantic and the only passenger ship captain to wear the Victoria Cross. It is expected that he will also be present at the Prince of Wales' dinner to V.C.s.

Rattery, Chesterwood; Geo. Stone, Seattle; Mesdames A. Cole, Gwynne; H. Greiner, Malmlo; W. Woods, Millet.

Two constitutional amendments were tabled to be brought up at the next convention. This was thought advisable, so as to enable Locals to thoroughly discuss them. One asking that the date of the convention be changed from March to November and the other "That a director coming from a district which is without a Local should have the power to vote at any convention nominating or otherwise."

A motion that a bigger and better convention be planned next year by the executive was carried with enthusiasm. This will embrace a banquet, followed by a meeting in which the Premier and some other member of the cabinet will be asked to give addresses.
Owing to the amount of business that had to be transacted, little time could be given to our Provincial member, E. E. Sparks; Wm. Irvine, M.P. for Battle River, to address the convention. However, all three spoke briefly and were warmly received.

That the whole proceedings of the Convention were satisfactory there is no doubt, and the general impression by those present is that the Provincial Association has taken a step forward and that the strong executive and board of directors will ensure its success.
